Webb Says “Just Gimme Back My Good Porn”: Maintains That Cyber Attacks Did Not End After the Dog Ate His Homework

(Washington, DC, September 30, 2016) With just 32 days remaining until the General Election, why would any serious contender in a safe district be wasting his precious campaign time harassing and intimidating a “non-candidate” who even the local press has described as “more weird than competitive?” Arlington’s Mike Webb, the “unabashed conservative,” who “started as grassroots as they come in the 21st century, with a Facebook page, and then local farmer’s markets and churches when that started gaining a following,” but who was rejected by his party establishment for a self-described moderate on a mission to become the Republican poster child for global climate maintains that even if he wanted to get out of the political campaign, his political rivals have continued their dogged pursuit, in a relentless mission of deceit, deception and defamation to get him to “GO AWAY.” And, this morning, the candidate who had a community laughing about his “dog ate my homework” excuse in April after he claimed that a cyber-attack had prevented him from timely filing his Federal Election Commission (FEC) financial disclosure reports, is filling out the second police report with the Arlington Police Department in a week regarding a type of “electronic warfare.” Webb maintains not just that his digital devices have been targeted, again, with virus infection, but also that his residence has been invaded by burglars who absconded with various electronic devices, including two cellular telephone chargers, one external drive and two digital cameras.

In the first police report submitted to Arlington Police regarding the recent string of thefts, Webb identified the incumbent Donald S. Beyer, Jr. as the chief suspect, and Webb has not received any word from the department regarding the disposition of the investigation, not even the issuance of a permanent police report number. His second police report, completed this morning, identifies the Republican nominee, Charles Hernick, in connection with the virus infection attacks. Webb maintains that since February, Hernick’s official entry into the congressional race, he has been daily harassed by Hernick’s internet troll pseudonym, Duffy Taylor, a Facebook user who originally did not have a face, much like the current caricature logo of the candidate.

After Webb petitioned the Arlington County District Court for a protective order to curtail Taylor’s threats, intimidation, electronic stalking and harassment, although the court rejected Webb’s petition, Taylor withdrew from contacting via email to Webb’s personal email accounts and began contacting him via Facebook inbox messages, where he did not provide Webb the opportunity to reply through usage of the blocking feature for responses. Webb identified Taylor, a/k/a Hernick, in the police report as a suspect regarding the virus infection because his daily messages to Webb often include picture files and links that Webb maintains are the only way that his cellular telephone, an iPhone, might have been infected.

Webb, who has produced over 30 videos, and who recently committed to producing 22 videos to raise awareness for veterans’ suicide in the #Kill22 campaign, had the capabilities of his iPhone degraded by a virus that, among other things, prevented him from uploading pictures and videos to his computer for later usage in video production. Webb still was able to joke about the matter, like he was joking on late night television in May after internet browser tabs he intentionally posted defied even the mass psychology of social media by going viral with to almost 650,000 users worldwide in less than 24 hours without any organized marketing or promotion effort. “Why anyone would want to dampen my drive to end veteran suicide is beyond my comprehension, but when you are going to steal my external drive with all of my good porn, too? Now, I am in this fight to the end. If Beyer wants porn, he can buy like the rest of us,” laughed Webb.

“Beyer says he is looking out for the little guy, but the only looking out for the little guy that I have seen from him since I got into this race was his looking out to make sure that I do not challenge his reign. Hernick says that he is holding a sitting congressman to a higher standard and is on a mission to change the status quo, but his alleged clean campaign against me has involved the cowardly usage of internet trolls, identity theft, inciting groups to perpetuate scandalous lies about my professional experience and mental stability, and just a Republican extension of the Beyer campaign, continuing the payola corruption legacy of the former Jim Moran,” stated Webb.

“But, the really disconcerting fact is that the community of law enforcement and justice, as well as the press, have decided not to take this seriously or pursue the matter. In my freshman year in college in the Shenandoah Valley, we had just named a new police chief, after the police department services had been suspended for over a year because that department had been implicated in a local theft ring. My politics professor called those days of anarchy the ‘Wild, Wild West, and you have to ask, if our law enforcement, justices, and administrative agencies are not going to protect and serve, who will take up that mission? And, many of those same people are crying to get rid of God, get rid of guns, and get rid of unborn children and traditional families? Does that make you happy? I don’t get a warm and fuzzy feeling when I think about it,” said Webb.

Webb has a series of videos that he hopes to continue to release this week for the veterans’ suicide challenge, but continues to face obstacles in producing and publishing the productions due to interference. And, this weekend, the candidate who apparently drank from a fountain of youth will be travelling to Hartford to participate in the Hartford Marathon and returning to the area for the Army Ten Miler on Sunday. Last night, the veteran who Hernick claims never served in the military was with several general level officers and senior leaders at the George Marshall Memorial Awards Dinner, concluding the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) Convention at the convention center in DC. On hand for the festivities included the honoree, General Gordon Sullivan, the former AUSA president, as well as former Secretary of Veterans Affairs and 34th U.S. Army Chief of Staff to the United States General Eric Shinseki. “I was enjoying my green space,” laughed Webb
